The Labor Relations Connection, Inc. (LRC)

After working for another agency in Boston for five years, I started The Labor Relations Connection, Inc. in 1984 to offer parties and arbitrators a more personalized, efficient, and cost-effective administrative service. For quite some time it was just me, but over the years I've built an amazing team of administrators, and we're seeing new growth every year. We are a neutral, third-party agency that exclusively administers Labor Arbitration cases for over 50 Unions and over 250 Employers in New England and beyond.

Since its inception, The LRC has been answering the need for Labor Arbitration, Mediation, Interest Arbitration, and Fact-Finding services for parties seeking organized, responsive, and professional case administration. We can even be reached outside of conventional business hours for the convenience of parties and arbitrators whenever the need may arise. At The LRC, we believe it's a privilege to work with Arbitrators; I've always held a firm belief in not charging an annual fee – or any fee – to be listed on our roster.

Outside of work, my husband and I are longtime Cape Cod residents. Previously, I've served in town politics (including two terms as a member of the Board of Selectman and two terms as Town Moderator) and was a Weight Watcher leader. Over recent years, I've dedicated most of my attention to The LRC, my family, fishing, and my extensive perennial gardens.
