

Since 1990, Jacquelin Drucker has maintained a nationwide practice devoted to the arbitration of labor, employment, class, and complex commercial matters. Before becoming a neutral, she practiced employment and labor law on the management side, worked as a union lobbyist, and served as general counsel and vice chair of a state labor board. Ms. Drucker is a former Governor of the National Academy of Arbitrators, former chair of its Employment Arbitration Committee, and former chair of the Labor and Employment Law Section of the New York State Bar Association. Ms. Drucker is a Fellow of the College of Labor and Employment Lawyers, and she recently completed 12 years of service on the American Arbitration Association's Board of Directors and Council.
