

ARCHANA MATHEW

Archana Mathew is a Grievance Officer at the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (OPSEU) where she has been working in the area of human rights and labour law for over 15 years. She advocates and litigates on behalf of employees and locals, with the goal of early and meaningful resolutions that aim to resolve underlying issues.

Archana is a frequent public speaker and trainer on topics related to human rights, privacy and labour law and recently created and taught a course at Osgoode Hall Law School related to Procedural Fairness and Human Rights. She is currently on the Board of Jur-Ed, a charity devoted to promoting legal education, an active member of the Ontario Bar Association - elected to the Constitutional, Civil Liberties and Human Rights Law Section and the Women Lawyer's Forum - and is a member of the Canadian Association of Labour Lawyers. Her past community involvement includes work on various boards such as Women's Health in Women's Hands, the Ontario Public Interest Research Group and curriculum development work with the Ontario Justice Education Network.
