Caroline Mandell is a legal communication and litigation consultant based in Toronto. She teaches basic and advanced decision writing to judges and adjudicators across Canada. She also works with litigators on how to craft a winning argument and—the trickiest part—how to communicate it to the court. Caroline is the host of a top-rated podcast series on writing reasons for In All Fairness, the Canadian Institute for the Administration of Justice's podcast channel. Caroline has a particular interest in the neuroscience of information processing and brings an evidence-based perspective to her work on effective communication.

From 2017-2019, Caroline was a member of Ontario's Health Professions and Health Services Appeal and Review Boards. From 2007-2017, she was counsel to the judges of the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Caroline has been an adjunct professor of Legal Research and Writing at the University of Toronto and is a subject-matter expert in Legal Research and Writing for Ryerson University's Law Practice Program. She is also a popular instructor in Osgoode Hall Law School's Professional LLM program. She has a JD and an MA from the University of Toronto and was called to the Ontario bar in 2005.

—————————————————————