

AUDREY ROOFEH

Audrey Roofeh is the founder and CEO of Mariana Strategies LLC, a workplace culture consulting firm with offices in Washington, DC, and Chicago. Mariana Strategies is focused on helping organizations create healthy and inclusive workplace cultures, from preventing workplace harassment to cultivating the emotional intelligence of teams. Audrey is an employment lawyer and certified change management practitioner, who frequently speaks and writes on issues of workplace equity and inclusion.

As CEO of Mariana Strategies, Audrey works with businesses in manufacturing, politics, fashion, sciences, and media, as well as national and international non-profits, banks, think tanks and educational institutions to deliver workplace culture solutions to prevent harassment and build inclusion. Audrey has delivered and facilitated hundreds of trainings and workshops across the US and internationally.

Audrey practiced law at Schlam, Stone & Dolan LLP, a boutique litigation firm in New York City, where she represented commercial clients in federal and state litigation as well as individuals in employment matters.

Audrey received her JD from Cardozo School of Law in New York. Audrey is a past Adjunct Professor at the University of New Hampshire School of Law, where she taught courses on Law of Human Trafficking, covering the intersections of human trafficking and immigration, international law, domestic violence, market-based responses and supply chains.

Audrey is the author of Many New Solutions to Workplace Sexual Harassment in A Post #MeToo Era, But Will They Do the Trick?, in the Routledge Handbook on the Politics of the #MeToo Movement, Oct. 2020.
